WORLD HUNGER WITH

BAKE A DIFFERENCE

Over one billion people across the world will go to bed hungry tonight. Fortunately there is something very simple and practical that every school can do to make a real difference.

Working in association with

Bake a Difference, working in association with National Baking Week (18-24 October), is a great new way to raise money for Concern Worldwide. We're asking people to bake their favorite goodies, sell them and donate the money to Concern. Concern works with the world's poorest people to help transform their lives — but they need your help to do it.

The great thing about Bake a Difference is that you can really make it your own: have a cake sale in your class or organise a whole school event! Money raised will be used to help people living in extreme poverty. Thousands of students and teachers took part last year, and we would like even more to join us in 2010.
