Free - ICT in Schools 2011 Conference
Wednesday 23rd and Thursday 24th March 2011
Aspiration – Collaboration – Inspiration
Making the Most of Technologies for Learning
Venue John Innes Conference Centre

This year's ICT conference will inspire schools to collaborate and build high aspirations for their learners. It will demonstrate how to make the most of the technologies already in place in schools and also look at inspiring future technology and services.

Norfolk Learners and organisations will show case content, projects and other fabulous learning supported by ICT.

National keynote speakers including Ewan McIntosh a leading educator on e-Learning and Dawn Hallybone an expert primary teacher on Games Based learning will set the scene for the days three main themes;

- Aspiration
- Collaboration
- Inspiration

The keynotes will be followed by simultaneous breakout sessions exploring the themes in greater depth, some of which will involve Norfolk schools who will share their ICT achievements. In addition to an exhibition area of ICT suppliers, surgeries offering schools one to one advice on key aspects of ICT services including; SIMS Management Information System (MIS), Broadband and Single Sign-on, Google and Virtual Learning Environments and the Home Access Project .

As a key networking opportunity, there will be both ideas for changing pedagogy more radically as well as some practical suggestions you might like to try straight away.
