

Drama, Learning and the Brain

How and why drama works for learning!
Friday 23rd September, 09:30-15:30
Norwich Professional Development Centre

“Recent dramatic advances in our understanding of the human brain and cognition ensure that the cognitive neurosciences will play an increasingly important role in educational policy and practice in the 21st century”

Robert Sylwester, (2005)

This one day conference is an opportunity to attend two inspirational, cross curricular drama workshops led by top national practitioners and a chance to hear a cutting edge keynote on ‘Drama, Learning and the Brain’ that will underpin the day.

This Conference is being held in partnership with National Drama, the leading subject association for UK drama teachers and theatre educators. The day will be led by:

Patrice Baldwin

World President of IDEA, Chair of National Drama and author of several books (including ‘With Drama in Mind’)

Rob John

Playwright, Theatre Director and past Vice Principal of Paston College

Pamela Bowell

National Drama Conferences Director, Visiting Reader at Bishop Grosseteste University College Lincoln
