

Religious Education Conference 2012

RE in the changing educational landscape

24 January 2012

Scarman House, University of Warwick

With curriculum changes and increasing religious and moral challenges, this unique, insightful event highlights how RE teachers can manage current developments and pressures.

Join your colleagues to:

- examine how the new Ofsted framework impacts on RE and the wider curriculum, classroom and community.
- improve engagement, planning and lesson outcomes through RE pedagogy
- engage with important figures on the future of RE education.
- deal effectively with controversial RE topics in the classroom
- learn more on outstanding teaching with mixed ability classes - transferable strategies for RE
- gain from leading practice in teaching and learning to help improve participation and achievement.
- benefit from the wide-ranging networking opportunities.
- This conference will give you excellent ideas and resources for immediate use in your school including:
 - leading-edge keynotes on the future of RE teaching and its role with the wider community;
 - the new Ofsted framework;
 - building resilience - managing controversy in RE;
 - outstanding teaching with mixed ability classes.

Plus much more in a programme packed with inspiring speakers, workshops and school showcases.

Keynote speakers

Alan Brine, HMI National Adviser for RE

Professor Robert Jackson, Professor of Education and Director, Warwick Religions and Education Research Unit

Who is the conference for?

Everyone who is passionate about improving education in RE and the wider curriculum:

- directors of humanities
- heads of department and teachers of RE.

Full details of the event can be found on www.theschoolsnetwork.org.uk/REconference