The Creative Communities Consortium (CCC) and Creative Arts East is pleased to invite you to an Arts for Health Opener - a meeting of arts and health professionals which will present the new Norfolk Arts and Wellbeing Action Research Project in more detail, share learning about the impact of arts for health and wellbeing and provide networking opportunities between sectors which can inform the future of the programme.

The Norfolk Arts and Wellbeing Action Research Project aims to consult service users on their access to and interest in arts provision and pilot creative participatory projects in response to their feedback. It seeks to support dialogue, collaboration and capacity-building between arts and health sectors in order to co-produce effective, stimulating and inclusive future services with and for users. Consultation design and delivery will begin in November 2013 with further activity taking place until October 2015.

This programme of work is funded by Arts Council England, Norfolk County Council Cultural Services and Norfolk County Council Adult Social Services.

The meeting is open to strategic and operational representatives from health, wellbeing and arts organisations, individual arts or health practitioners, and others interested in this field of work.
