

Right from the start: effective behaviour management in the primary phase

'Culture, behaviour and attitudes to learning determine the success of a school.'* HMCI

The importance of positive behaviour and attitudes in determining overall effectiveness continues to be in the spotlight with Ofsted requiring schools to have behaviour management systems that impact on pupil outcomes. This course will unpick these requirements and, in light of this, will support delegates as they review their current policy and practice to determine effectiveness and identify areas for development. In order for behaviour to be 'right from the start', the importance of developing a culture where the behaviour of pupils fully contribute to 'good' and 'outstanding' outcomes will be a key focus.

- Fully understand the current Ofsted requirements, from a range of sources, for behaviour
- Understand the key components of effective behaviour management practices and review own current policy and practice
- Determine next steps and action plan for success.
