

100 years ago in Norwich, the Colman's Mustard factory employed thousands of men. 921 of those enlisted to fight for our freedom in WW1.

100 years ago, families were torn apart. Mums and young girls took over at the factory. They lived in homes where people still lived today. They wept at the news of their loved ones' deaths, and rejoiced when their men returned home.

First World War: Poems in Performance

Enlist to become a

WW1 Heritage Hero

History was made on your doorstep

Arts Award Summer School

August 4th - 7th

Free of charge!

Your Heritage Heroes mission will be:

Discover the poets and poems written from the WWI frontlines and homefronts.

Work with Andy Bennett, a published performance poet.

In partnership with BBC Voices, perform and record your own performance poetry
inspired by the poets of the past.

Achieve your Bronze Arts Award!

Contact Sarah Power, Education
Officer at Norwich HEART
sarahpower@heritagecity.org
01603 599579

Book soon - limited places!