Thinking it through: English for learning and life

Our key note speaker is none other than Professor David Crystal, writer, broadcaster, editor, lecturer and grammar guru. David will encourage thinking about the English language by sharing his knowledge and expertise on Grammar in his talk 'Grammar rules' before then being on hand to answer all your grammar questions in a Q&A session.

Jason Buckley: The Philosophy Man believes exploring philosophical questions is deep fun for youngsters and their teachers. He writes resources, runs pupil workshops and trains teachers in philosophy for children to help children change from passive spoon-feeders to curious, independent questioners.

Let's Think in English: Michael Walsh

Informed by 30 years' research at King's College London, Let's Think in English is based on reading and uses English texts – fiction, poetry and non-fiction to develop children's reasoning and enhance thinking skills through structured group discussion.
