KS3 Geography

Homes or habitats?

Who matters most, people or animals? An application has been made to build houses on the Gressenhall farm site. Students must decide what should be done. They question four characters with very different attitudes to the development and express their own views at the planning enquiry. A living geography investigation using contemporary rural issues to enhance speaking, listening and decision-making skills.

Dates available by request.

Full day event (10.00am to 2.00pm)
£5.00 per student.

Was the Workhouse so Bad?

Explore Victorian attitudes to poverty and morality in this active historical enquiry. The day introduces your students to different sources of evidence and interpretations as they meet costumed characters and explore workhouse buildings and our new workhouse exhibition. The programme provides evidence for students to write up a coursework assignment.

KS3 History / Literacy

Workhouse Whodunnit?

Find out about life in Victorian England through our dramatic Whodunnit? A poor female inmate has been murdered in the workhouse. Students meet costumed characters and help to discover who has committed the terrible crime. This engaging day lays bare Victorian moral attitudes and places the workhouse in its historic context. It encourages communication skills and is perfect as the basis for literacy work.

Dates available by request.

Full day event (10.00am to 2.00pm)
£5.00 per student.
