

Thinking in English

Internationally acclaimed speakers together for one day, exploring what really makes English tick.

Professor David Crystal
Michael Walsh
Jason Buckley
Rob Smith

Thinking in English

Promote thinking, Promote Learning.

Outline

Join us in exploring the best ways to develop young people's thinking and transform your teaching of English. Our keynote speaker is none other than Professor David Crystal, writer, broadcaster, editor, lecturer and grammar guru. He will encourage thinking about the English language by sharing his knowledge and expertise on Grammar in his talk 'Grammar rules' before then being on hand to answer all your grammar questions in a Q&A session.

Exciting, hands-on workshops on the day:

Michael Walsh from 'Let's Think in English' uses quality texts – fiction, poetry and non-fiction – to develop children's reasoning and enhance thinking skills through structured group discussion. Informed by 30 years' research at King's College London, Let's Think in English has proved successful across the country.

Jason Buckley, 'The Philosophy Man' writes resources, runs pupil workshops and trains teachers in philosophy for children to help children change from passive spoon-feeders to curious, independent questioners.

Rob Smith, creator of the spectacularly successful website 'The Literacy Shed'. Rob explores a wealth of still and moving images from all genres and topics to inspire discussions and engage children in the process of writing.

Impact

Get inspired, enthused and feel empowered to change the way you think about English in your school.
