

Department for Education: Phonics Roadshow

This FREE event run by the University of Reading in conjunction with local experts is part of an exciting DfE initiative to promote the effective teaching of synthetic phonics.

Course Outline

Reading University has extensive experience of research into reading development and in collaboration with Norfolk they aim is to inspire teachers to teach phonics enthusiastically and rigorously with due attention to children's enjoyment of and learning from their school's chosen phonics programme.

Outcomes:

Roadshow participants will benefit from being provided with examples of best practice in the teaching of systematic synthetic phonics and the huge benefits this can bring to children's development as readers, together with opportunities to engage in teaching activities. Following the event, there will be email discussion groups and helpline for use of participants and their schools.

In preparation for this training, you are asked to carry out the provided audit of phonics practice in your school.
