

Developing History in the Primary Curriculum

A one day course that equips teachers to build a History programme of study that dovetails with the core curriculum.

Course Outline

History can be seen as a set of memorable dates and events. However, an effective History curriculum seeks to understand concerns of change and continuity, and exploring similarities and differences.

This course equips subject leaders with the tools to create a coherent long term plan for History which equips the learner with the skills and concepts needed to understand History.

By the end of the course participants will:-

- identify the core knowledge of the history programme of study in the National Curriculum
- build a school programme in History that is tailored to the needs and locality of the school
- identify real opportunities for meaningful writing and mathematics across the curriculum
- describe the progression of skills in History in the primary phase
