

Collaboration in teachers' professional development.

Discussion Group on the current status and potential future extension of Lesson
Study in the eastern region.

When:

25.09.18

4pm – 6pm

Find out how you can get involved in a collaborative community of action research.

FREE ENTRY

&

Refreshments
from 4pm

Where:

Educator Solutions,
Norwich
Professional Development
Centre, Woodside
Road, NR7 9QL

Book your place today by emailing enquiry@educatorsolutions.org.uk

+ What is Lesson Study?

Lesson Study is a collaborative form of teacher research which has been used in the Far East for decades. It has strong links to the classroom action research approach to teacher development pioneered at UEA by Lawrence Stenhouse, John Elliott and others. It is perhaps then unsurprising that Lesson Study has been gaining momentum in the UK for a few years and East Anglia has been quietly building a body of expertise.

JOIN US

25.09.18

Hear from leading academics, leaders and teachers in the region who have been using the Lesson Study approach to enhance teachers professional development.

Why get involved?

- 1 Join a group of innovative, forward thinking practitioners from the eastern region
- 2 Conduct your own action research focusing on an 'object of learning' you know to be a troublesome area of the curriculum
- 3 Work towards Masters accreditation through the UEA
- 4 Be published in a leading journal and contribute to a global body of action research into student learning