

Celebrating Difference in the EYFS

Course Outline

Are you embracing diversity and inclusion in your setting?

Increasingly, early years settings are recognising the importance of creating environments that celebrate difference.

Underpinned by the Equality Act, 2010 and as part of early years Ofsted inspections, the EYFS has a legal standard requiring them to celebrate difference and tackle gender stereotypes.

This interactive and practical course will explain why thinking about lesbian, gay, bi and trans inclusion is important in early years and how this fits into existing practice, and wider inclusion work. Staff will be shown how to meet the statutory requirements of the EYFS. Attendance is welcomed by any practitioner working with children aged 0-5 whatever their role, confidence level or knowledge of diversity or inclusion.

By the end of training, participants will:

- know and understand why celebrating difference within an early years setting is important
- feel confident to identify and challenge stereotypes
- experience practical activities to deliver with children, families and staff
- develop an action plan to foster an inclusive environment for all service users to thrive
- Develop the tools to create an inclusive setting that meets the legal requirements of EYFS
