

Teaching RSE in KS1: Naming Body Parts and Positive Relationships

Does your school adequately help prevent abuse and protect children through RSE teaching?

Course Outline

The focus in primary school should be on teaching the fundamental building blocks and characteristics of positive relationships. Pupil knowledge of correct terminology for external genitalia, taught in an age-appropriate manner will support effective Relationships and Sex Education (RSE), safeguarding and develop an important foundation for future teaching and learning in Personal, Social and Health Education (PSHE), RSE and Science. Knowing when to start this teaching, what is age-appropriate and how to manage pupils' arising questions can feel a challenge.

This course will enable your school to deliver effective teaching and assessment of these topics.

Training Outcomes:

- Increase confidence to use and teach correct scientific terms to describe the main external parts of the body in an age-appropriate way.
- Teach sensitively to pupils about permission seeking and giving and the concept of personal privacy.
- Explicitly teach the features of healthy relationships, what family means and who the people are who can support them.
- Identify assessment of learning strategies.
