Recognising and Meeting the Needs of the Gifted and Talented in Drama

Recognising pupils who are gifted and talented in drama and then supporting them appropriately is an area that gives rise to many issues. This course will assist Norfolk teachers to explore the issues surrounding the identification of gifted and talented pupils of drama. Participants will be supported during the session to reach a consensus about the criteria that will inform good practice and which could form the basis of a Norfolk model.

Course Leader: Jonothan Neelands, Senior Lecturer in Drama in Education, Institute of Education, University of Warwick. Jonothan has an international reputation as an innovative workshop leader, speaker, educational writer and practitioner.
