Using Drama Strategies Creatively to Develop Speaking and Listening at the Excellence and Enjoyment states that an immediate priority for literacy is "Securing the place of speaking and listening both as a key foundation for literacy and also as an essential component for all learning". Working in role and drama strategies provide an engaging way of creating vivid and meaningful contexts for modeling and developing speaking and listening in classes, pairs and groups.

This course will:

- practically and interactively demonstrate ways in which key drama strategies can offer structures for modeling speech for different purposes and to different audiences
- provide a model for the integration of speaking, listening, reading and writing
- consider recent research relevant to "talk" and learning.

Course Leader: Patrice Baldwin, Adviser for the Promotion of the Arts in Schools and Vice Chair of National Drama.

Cost: £115.00
