

Teaching Thinking Creatively Through Drama

Whole class drama enables "inter-thinking" in imagined worlds. Drama strategies can be considered as thinking frames that enable teachers to stimulate, scaffold and develop different types of thinking. High quality thinking processes are congruent with high quality "Process Drama".

This innovative and ground-breaking day is being run in partnership with National Drama, the leading association of UK drama educators. It will provide a rare opportunity to work practically and creatively alongside specialist drama teachers from across the UK as well as non-specialists and beginners from across Key Stages 2 and 3. Participants will gain a fascinating insight into the way that the mind is working during the creative, drama-making process and will leave feeling empowered to use drama creatively to develop thinking skills.

Course Leaders: Steve Bowkett an inspirational teacher, writer, consultant and hypnotherapist who uses story to develop thinking and creativity. Patrice Baldwin, Adviser for the Promotion of the Arts in Schools uses storydrama creatively to develop real learning in imagined worlds. They have previously worked together with international drama educators.
