

Acting headteacher opportunity in the west of Norfolk: Autumn Term 2006

Following the promotion of current headteacher, Jill Davis, to the headship of a larger school, the governors of Tilney All Saints CE VC Primary School are advertising for her successor for appointment in January 2007.

During the autumn term 2006, the school will need an acting headteacher. Governors are keen to offer this opportunity to a current deputy/assistant head or senior teacher who aspires to and is preparing for headship, and would welcome expressions of interest from suitable individuals, which in the first instance, should be made via the local School Improvement Support Officer, Mike Simm.

Tilney All Saints is a school with a caring, inclusive ethos, situated in a rural village located between the A47 and the A17, 4 miles west of King's Lynn. It offers a modern, stimulating environment within which children of all abilities are offered a creative curriculum and enjoy success. The school was last inspected in January 2003, and its overall effectiveness was found to be satisfactory. Since then, standards have risen, and in 2005 were well above the average for Norfolk and showed very good added value.

To take up this opportunity, teachers will need the support and permission of their headteacher and the governing body.
