Schools and Children's Services: The Emerging Agenda

Thursday 28th April
17:30 to 19:00
Lecture Theatre 2
University of East Anglia

Lisa Christensen

Director of Children's Services in Norfolk

The Children's Act 2004 set in motion changes in the way in which local authorities and other agencies will organise their provision for children and young people. These changes are on an unprecedented scale and demand much closer integration of education, social work, health and other services than had previously been thought possible.

In Norfolk, education and social work services for children and young people have been brought together under the heading Children's Services and further work to achieve good integration is to follow. Lisa Christensen has been appointed the new Director of Children's Services for Norfolk and will be talking to us about her vision for what the new combined service will achieve for children and young people and how this will affect teachers and schools.
