

Animal Face Painting @ Ipswich Museum

Thursday 14th February – Saturday 16th February

Are you a tiger, a snake or maybe even a bear? Whatever animal lurks within you, you can let it come out by coming along and having your face painted at Ipswich Museum.

There are so many fantastic animals on display in the natural history gallery in the museum that you won't be short of inspiration for animal-tastic ideas. What will take your fancy? Could it be the rhino, the giraffe, or even the giant woolly mammoth! Whether you have a favourite animal in mind, or feel inspired by the beautiful beasts on display at the museum, our professional face painter from Cheeky Chops Faces will fulfil your wishes.

From ancient times face painting has been used for hunting, religious ceremony and even by the military for camouflage. It is still widely used all over the world today and it is commonplace for entertainment at parties, fairs, festivals and more.

Come along and have some beastly fun!

Admission to museum is free. £1 per face painted.
Drop-in activity 10am - 12:45pm and 1:45pm - 4:45pm.
