

Wear Red for Heart

Please help children with heart defects by supporting Wear Red for Heart this June. On Friday 13 June 2003, or any day during Heart Week, 7-15 June, wear something red and make a donation. Pick red socks or spectacles, or dress in red from top to toe. Better still, why not organise a Wear Red event for friends or colleagues, team or schoolmates?

Every year in the UK thousands of babies are born with life-threatening heart defects. In the 1960s only one in five babies born with a serious heart defect survived. Today, thanks to medical advances which the British Heart Foundation has helped to fund, four out of five babies survive. However, these children face many challenges and hospital treatment which can make them feel different and isolated. We need to provide special nurses, heart information and advice to support children and their families as they overcome these problems.
