

Charity Dress Down Friday for Louis Braille's birthday party!

The 4th January 2009 was 200 years since the birth of Louis Braille. Without his legacy of the Braille system thousands of blind and partially sighted people in the UK would miss out on the joy and knowledge of reading. Braille has been adapted in almost every language and is available on bus stops, restaurant menus and even sheet music. Braille is made up of 'dots' which represent the letters of the alphabet. We are the largest publisher of Braille in Europe and provide a bespoke transcription service to blind people, including text books, Birthday cards and personal letters.

Help us celebrate the bicentennial of Louise Braille's life and invention by making your company's dress down day in aid of RNIB.

Make your Braille's Birthday Party a 'dotty' theme and ask everyone to wear something with spots or dots and to make a donation to RNIB on your chosen day.

Without support from organisations like yours we would be unable to rebuild lives devastated by sight loss.
